WE'VE MADE IT!

For two centuries, this country has been through almost everything. It has suffered through the lean years, rejoiced over the victories, and pulled through the in-between times . . . it's been quite a history. Over the years many of the hopes and dreams of our forefathers have been fulfilled . . . we are no longer dominated by foreign powers — in fact, this nation has become a major power in the world today. But in ways, some of these dreams are yet to be fulfilled. We are still striving to bring about equality — "liberty and justice for all" — and we are continually searching for the key to "individual freedom." For us as students, 1976 was more important — more relevant — than the other 199. That's why this book is a record of ONE YEAR OUT OF TWO HUNDRED.

TITLE PAGE:

In a year in which we remember the last 100 years, the fishing fleet represents a link between past and present. The Yugoslav and Italian fisherman who came to San Pedro at the turn of the century typify the dream of founding fathers who envisioned a land in which people could find a better life.

1776-1976

Of course, all two hundred are important. But 1976 was most important to us as students. The problems of 1976 were our problems, the issues of 1976 involved us . . . what's happening now was more relevant than what happened two hundred years ago. Yet, each of the last one hundred and ninety-nine years has in some way influenced 1976. It is what has happened and what is happening that shapes what will happen. As the events of two hundred years ago paved the way for the events of today, we too are molding the future. Future generations depend on us. This book is a record of events of 1975-1976, a year that started shaping the next 200 years.

Enjoying the cool of the waves, often students may spend free time at beaches.

Wondering about the future and what is ahead, ROSEMARY GRIGAS stares into the future.

HERITAGE '76

Most of us weren't around to see the birth of the country in 1776 . . . or the Civil War . . . or World War II. Few of us clearly remember the Kennedy administration or the moon walk of 1969. All of us know about these things. We have studied them for years, read about them, heard about them. But we weren't there. We can never know how the events actually appeared but each has its own special meaning for every individual. We are teenagers shaped by the events of the past, and by the contributions from people of England and Eastern America, but Italian, Yugoslavian, Asian, and Afro-American heritages, too.

Inventions: the world was often amazed by creative Yankees. TERRY FROMHOLD's work shows many American advancements in the world of creation.

Pioneers, as in RON SOTO's drawing, helped form American society and discover a continent.

The Bald Eagle and the Stars and stripes are symbols used by BRENDABETZLER in a still getting them decided in two centuries ago.

In an imaginary history book, PAT GILLOGLY illustrates three major events in American history.

Many times American people have gone to war, conditions and equipment have changed, but the people are still the same. SUZIE IZQUIERDO used three soldiers from major wars in her drawing of American Defense.

A more relaxed atmosphere pervaded the campus . . . a more tolerant attitude among the students . . . an emphasis on enjoying the school experience. There was not a difference in the school itself — the campus was the same. Most of the faculty was the same, so were the classes. The evident difference was in the students, their changing nature and mood as they became more interested in the world around them, and the unique experiences that life can provide unnerving. Football in July? The football season started off with many team members signed up for weight training. Fourteen girls went to cheerleading camp at Loyola Marymount College to learn new cheers. One of the diversions of the summer at the beach was the showing of the hit movie "Jaws."

August . . . the month of endings and beginnings. It was a time for last summer flings and of preparing for a new year of school. Families took advantage of vacation time in August before preparations for school began. Our last summer fling was "Star Spangled Girl," a Neil Simon comedy that ran from July 31 to August 5 and brought packed houses at every performance. The play had only three characters, BILL STEEL, JEFF GOULD, both graduates and JULIE EPPLER, a junior. Getting ready for the school year many Drill Team members attended and won an award at camp for their spirit. Together with the Flag Team who attended camp at Pepperdine Malibu, five editors attended Malibu Yearbook Conference at which MR. CURTIS SHEFFIELD was director. Buying new clothes and school supplies and taking early senior portraits were all part of the end of summer. Students looked back with mixed emotions over the fun of summer and the grand plans that were never carried out.

ONE day in the year

True enough, 1976 was probably the most important year of 200 to students. But the year was divided into semesters, then quarters, days and periods. Most students took life as it came, day by day. This photo essay in the midst of the "Student Life" section is a composite of daily life for San Pedro students during the 200th year of our nation.

1971 Transportation

Having your own vehicle is an advantage, as it is for JOE GREGORIO and MICHELLE SCHEUR.

Motorcycles were not as popular as before, but to WAYNE FAUSCETTE it's a ride in the morning.

Rides from friends' parents are one way of transportation.

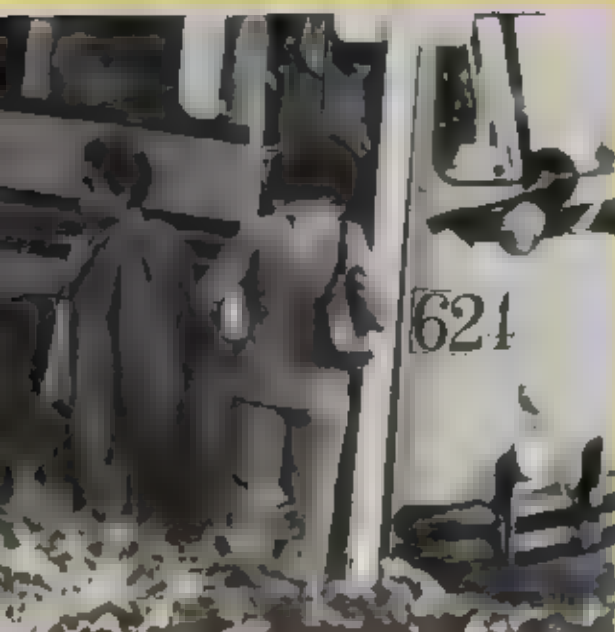

Walking to school saved gas but not energy for DONNA NISHI and ROSALIE MAKI.

The methods students devised for traveling to school each day were as varied as the students themselves. Some chose, or were forced, to walk; others bummed rides off friends with cars. Still other favored the economy of a motorcycle, or rode the school bus or RTD. Those lucky enough to have cars had a convenient way of getting to school. But, because of the encroachment of the Dana campus on the high school property, the student parking lot was moved to a smaller location, and street parking was even more of a headache. Warm weather encouraged bike riding, and coasting to school on a skateboard seemed as popular as ever.

Early arrival provides time for PATTY PALACIOS and LISA MEDINA to chat before class on the 17th Street walk.

Buses are one of the ways used for transportation by RAY ROGERS and PHYLLIS COVENTON.

Every student knew the torture of waking up in the morning and each had a different method of dealing with it. For some there was a daily ritual of sleeping until the last possible minute, then rushing off to school to try to beat the tardy bell. Others enjoyed getting up early each morning, and had no problem getting to "A" period gym classes as the sun was rising. For some, the morning routine included stopping at a fast food place along Gaffey for breakfast, while others grabbed doughnuts. Still others simply skipped it. Some students enjoyed getting to school early to meet with friends, and some arrived ahead of time, struggling to finish homework for morning classes. But by 8:10, the bell had rung, and the often-tedious school day ahead had officially begun.

Going to class and breaks for lunch and nutrition. This was the formal schedule. But other sights and activities stuck in the minds of students. Wandering on campus after convincing the teacher you just had to make it to the restroom ran the risk of getting caught by campus aides. The aides themselves were often alumni who already knew the stories you tried to feed them. Favorite sports or decorated areas were other features that gave a large campus a feeling of belonging to you and your friends. Other memories included getting to nutrition early to avoid lines, being roused by the police or security officers, conversations in senior court, cigarettes in the head, throwing frisbees in front of the auditorium. These also played a part in the day of a student.

out to lunch

The number of students who clock watched at the end of second and fourth periods was evidence that nutrition and lunch provided the release many students needed each day from the routine of classes. Nutrition provided a chance for socializing as groups gathered regularly throughout the school in such places as the Health Office, the amphitheatre, the bathrooms, the lawns, or senior court.

Many seniors finished their school day by 12:30 and went to work, other students simply enjoyed getting off campus for a short while. For some students, nutrition and lunch meant extra time to work on homework, or work on school activities. Because of the relaxed atmosphere, nutrition and lunch remained the favorite time of day for many students.

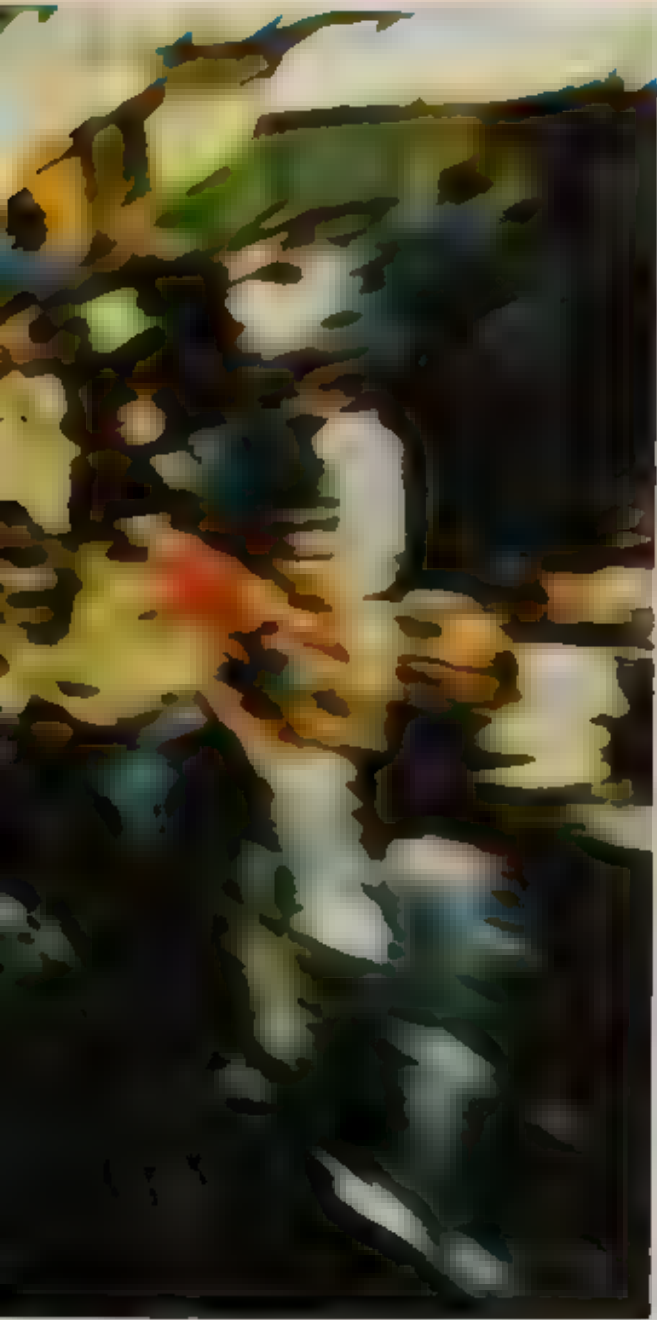

One of the advantages of a lunch permit is being able to go off campus, as JUAN ORTEGA does to enjoy his lunch at McDonald's.

There are crowds with a crowd as students gossip with each other.

After being separated during classes, MARK VAUGHN and GINA HURTADO share a sandwich at lunch.

Off campus learning? Those students who were fortunate enough to use the facilities of Harbor Occupational Center, San Pedro and Peninsula Community Hospital, and Harbor College received the benefits from career programs. Although a wide variety of classes on campus were offered, trying to get those you wanted required initiative. Fourth year language classes were not a success, but the addition of Italian proved to be a popular decision. Advanced placement and independent study programs were curtailed because of budget considerations, and class sizes remained large. The tables were turned as girls participated in more co-ed PE and shop classes. While chronic clock-watching plagued many students, many teachers tried to break the monotony of a routine. MR. WILLIAM KARG and MR. JOE MARDESICH combined their government classes and met in the auditorium or amphitheatre; other teachers scheduled field trips.

ROUTINES

Everyone had individual ways to unwind after the last class and San Pedro students were liable to be found almost anywhere. Some students began homework, finding it easier to get it out of the way rather than put it off, but others found that all they could do when they got home was grab something to eat before they fell asleep. For those students competing on San Pedro teams, afternoons meant long, hard hours of practice and suffering through the extremes of autumn weather. Many headed for the beaches for surfing or just catching the last rays, and games of volleyball and basketball were as popular as ever. Hang gliding, motocross, and skateboarding were still in evidence, and many simply enjoyed cruising or getting outside. For many, of course, after-school hours meant work. Students had jobs ranging from exercising horses and babysitting to short-order cooks and clerking in local stores. Besides cash, an item most San Pedro students seemed to always be short of, a side benefit for some was Work Experience credit.

Making sure, MARLA McWILLIAMS is careful to take reservations accurately for Ports o' Call Restaurant.

GRIND, GRIND, GRIND...

Somehow students managed to find time to do things other than homework. Many students had jobs in the evening, working at fastfood restaurants, down at Ports o' Call, or in one of the local stores. Friday and Saturday nights were the high points of many students' weeks, most going out of San Pedro for entertainment. Many headed for movies in Torrance or Westwood, and dances at Mary Star and the Longshoreman's Hall in Wilmington were popular spots. Rock concerts were a popular form of entertainment, especially with so many concert halls located in the LA area. But rising prices continued to be a damper, and partying and get-togethers with friends were a more inexpensive way to spend the weekend nights for some. And even with the high price of gas, cruising was still a popular San Pedro pasttime # bUMMED out!

Homework was one grim reality confronting almost every student each evening. While virtually everyone complained about the homework load, it seemed strange that teachers all appeared to schedule tests on the same day.

The amount of hours put into homework seemed staggering, and one of the most familiar greetings between friends was, "You won't believe how late I stayed up doing homework last night!" The most popular way for friends to keep in touch during week nights was the telephone, and the confrontations teenagers and parents had over its use were practically clichés. For those without homework, evenings provided a chance to relax and unwind by watching TV, catching up on sleep, or "kicking back" to their favorite records.

Many evenings are spent gabbing to friends on the phone as shown here by SUSAN GATES, JODI MIHELICH and JAMESON GARRETT.

The year was off to a good start with the traditional toilet-papering of Senior Court. This solemn ritual is performed every September by the cheerleaders or drill team members.

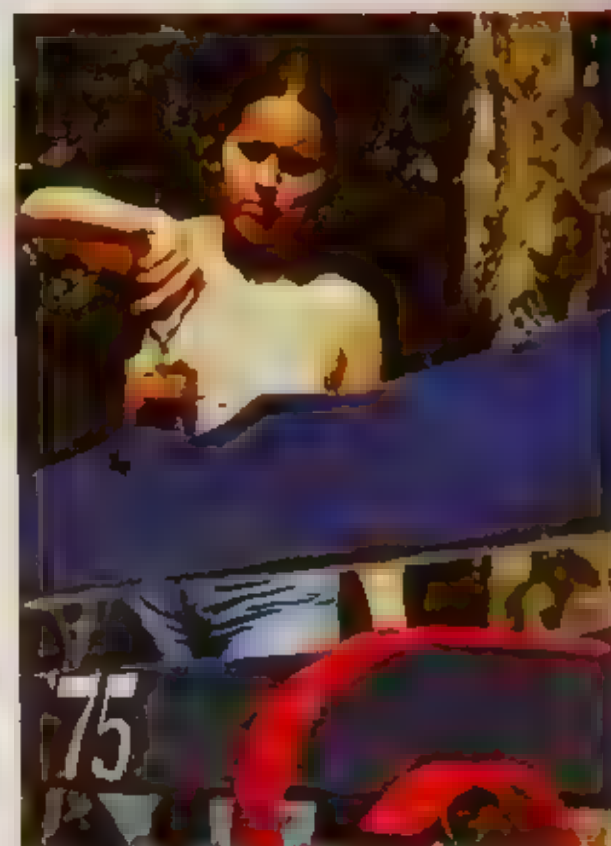

Another beginning-of-school tradition was carried out as many seniors got together to paint the benches, poles, and trees of Senior Court in their class colors. The cans of red, white and blue paint were donated by Big C Building Supplies. San Pedro Day at the County Fair in Pomona took place on Sept. 17. Miss San Pedro 1975 was there, along with various others from the community.

October was the month students began to drift back into the routine of school, but the lingering summer weather still induced many to try and hold on to summer. Weekend concerts outdoors on the grass at local stadiums became a new Southern California phenomenon, headlining such acts as Chicago and the Beach Boys, Rod Stewart and Eagles. But for many, the most important rock happening was the long awaited Elton John concert, held at Dodger stadium the last weekend in October. The 1976 yearbook staff successfully implemented a new sales campaign, focused on a special assembly to order yearbooks, and a one-day sale. Student Government realigned its structure with the creation of a student assembly, a homeroom representation system, and began the culmination of Homecoming plans.

Each student, teacher, and administrator had his or her own interpretation of what school spirit was — but all agreed that the essence of it at San Pedro High School was participation.

Most readily identifiable were the cheerleaders, drill team, and pep squad — but school spirit really went beyond that. Students became involved in some phase of school life beyond attending classes. Many students participated in one of the athletic teams, activities or service organizations. Perhaps the best way to measure school spirit was the incredible number of after-school hours that a growing number of students put into school activities — and the enthusiasm and hard-work that went into all those hours.

One of the many new fashions around campus is the fade-out look: dark at one end and continually getting lighter through the jacket.

In overalls and a pendleton, LOUIE BALLI heads for his hang-out in the nutrition area.

In 1976, clothes again emerged as a dominant force. Students spent more time, interest and money on things to wear. The old styles of jeans and T-shirt stayed, as ever, in the student fashion scene. It seemed that no one was ready to give up the comfort and casualness of their "old favorites." At the same time, however, there was a growing tendency to "dress up" more. Dresses came back into style after a long vacation. Even blue jeans were displaying this less casual look, as new and different styles developed.

The month of November seemed to restore a lot of the spirit that may have been lost somewhere along the way. Ladies organization, aided by CLAUDIA DARLING, worked together to paint on the brick wall of the amphitheatre a mural depicting a bright orange and yellow sun. The month wasn't lacking in entertainment. Under the instruction of MRS. ELIZABETH SHUCK, the choir, madrigal singers, and several soloists put on a bicentennial celebration called "Music America." The program, held Nov. 12 at 7:30 pm, featured solos by JOANN LABARBERA, BERT OLGUIN, TAMATRIA HALEY, JOHN ROLFE, and others. For several days, varsity cheerleaders carried around soda cartons with various football players' names on the cans to see who would get the most kisses. Meanwhile, the Bee football players were having their own contest. The whole operation was designed to raise funds as well as school spirit. The month was topped off by the annual San Pedro Christmas Parade on the last Saturday. The band and drill team led off the SPHS units in the parade. Lady Boosters entered a float with a "Night Before Christmas" theme, on which the Homecoming Court rode and wore pajamas.

"OPERATION: STAY IN SCHOOL"

Vandalism, theft and other forms of violence flourished in several of the LA area schools. An area conference was held so that students from each junior and senior high school could discuss these problems and suggest solutions. Later, a city-wide conference was held. One result of these conferences was the realization that the problems of vandalism and theft were not nearly as severe at SPHS as at many other LA schools. However, a major problem here was absences. On an average day, about 30 students were discovered truant.

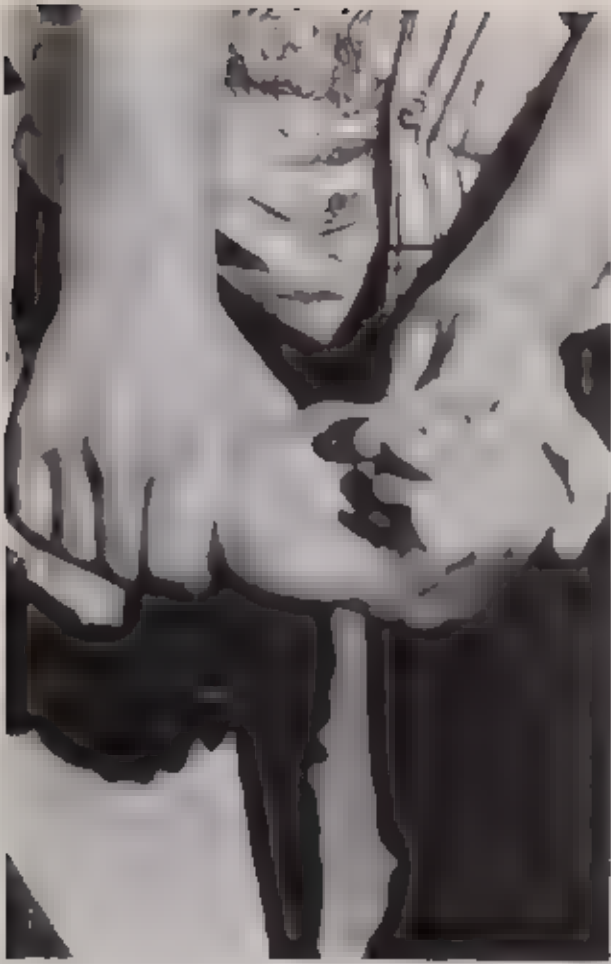

A special program, "Operation Stay in School," was initiated. Two police officers patrolled the surrounding areas from 8 am to 3 pm every day. The program was inspired by residents of nearby areas, who complained about students making noise, loitering and "disturbing the peace."

Most students in school don't carry large amounts of money with them. However, some do, and some of those lose that money.

When some people get locked out, they simply break in. Many a lock, chain and window were replaced due to this philosophy.

Theft of student property and money brought consternation to the minds of the average pupil. Some students carried lunches to school rather than run the risk of losing money.

Lunch time afforded a good chance for students to engage in social intercourse, however neighbors of the school became irked when it took place in the yards.

These photos were posed but reflect accurately conditions on campus

The debris from students' lunchtime activities, papers, cigarette packs and beer bottles caused many an irate property owner to call the school in complaint of student litter.

Horsing around or just plain beating up each other occupied a fair portion of some students' time during '76.

The Christmas holidays formed a necessary release period for many students. The pressures and tensions of several months in school came out in the form of the party New Year's Eve, the last day of school, or any other occasion that came to mind formed the perfect excuse for celebration. For many, however, it was a traditional Christmas. Visiting relatives and having sumptuous feasts were standard. Still others used the vacation to take trips to Hawaii, Mexico, San Francisco, the ski slopes or a vast choice of other places. The Ski Club's fund-raising activities culminated in a trip to Colorado. The Key Club and YMCA Youth and Government were involved in service projects such as working in the YMCA Christmas tree lot. Large numbers of students found it necessary to work more hours at their jobs in order to compensate for the increased amount of money spent on Christmas presents and their partying activities. Although the mild weather was a curse to the skiers, it was a blessing to the average student, who simply wanted to relax and enjoy the free time

The new year was ushered in by Key Club leaders JERRY MARINER and BOB MOORE, who organized a 24-hour dance marathon for Muscular Dystrophy held at Old Towne Mall January 9-10. Also on the 9th, tuberculin tests were given during PE classes and even though graduation seemed far away seniors were measured for caps and gowns. "Spirit Week," on the 13th, began with "Crazy Day" on which students and teachers were urged to wear whatever unusual grab they wished. On the next day a special pep rally was held. "Spirit Week" finished up with a lively "International Day" in which different clubs set up booths and sold foods from the foreign countries they represented. The Band and Drill Team performed, but unfortunately didn't place in the Band and Drill Team competition at the L.A. Sports Arena on the 13th. ## END OF SEMESTER

The coming of the end of the school semester meant hassles with registration, cramming for finals and filling out countless forms. The new officers for spring were: President, ROBERT WHITNEY; Vice-president, NAT RUSSO; Secretary, JUDY SMITH; Treasurer, DONNA NISHI; Historian, KAREN WATERMAN. When this country first came into being, it was the hope of the founders that it would someday be a home to people of many different cultures. 200 years later, their hopes are still on the way to being fulfilled. America has become famous for its acceptance of the world's homeless. It has been called a "melting pot," people of diverse backgrounds all forming a single unit. San Pedro High exemplifies the idea of "worlds within a world." Among the students and faculty are Mexican Americans, Blacks, Italians, Orientals, and Yugoslavians. In the bicentennial year, SPHS had the unique opportunity to add Vietnamese and Cambodian students. There exists a microcosm of the various ethnic groups in America.

February was a high scoring month for Band, Drill Team and Flags. In competition, band brought in a 1st place, KAREN WEGNER as Drum Major got a 2nd, Drill Team a 1st, Tall Flags a 3rd and Short Flags pulled in a 1st. The competition came in the form of a Bicentennial Parade taking place in Carson. The week after the Carson Parade was one of confusion. Lincoln's and Washington's birthdays caused it. Thursday, the 12th, was Lincoln's birthday, so school was out for the day. Friday was a normal school day, followed by a three day weekend. Many students seemed to feel that going to school on Friday was an undue hardship, considering the no-school days surrounding it. Attendance workers in both the Attendance Office and the Counselors' Office were required to deal with the near-record number of absence slips. Black History Week, a parade at Magic Mountain, Valentine Candy Grams and lots of rain made February a very entertaining month.

A glimpse of the action on the line in the middle of the fury shows ANTHONY PESCE (51) using a stand up attack to hold off Mary Star.

In the bicentennial year, much of that typical American enthusiasm was evident at San Pedro . . . spirits were high, even if the scores sometimes weren't. The Board of Education made a "landmark" decision in September to ban sex discrimination in athletics. Although at SPHS some girls had been members of the cross country and swim teams in previous years, the team sports of tennis, baseball, soccer and basketball were now open to women as well as men. For the first time in the history of athletics at SPHS, a girl (ELAINE STRGACICH) tried out for the baseball team. However, the "contact sports" of football, water polo, and wrestling remained no-man's-land (no-woman's-land?)

PERSONAL

The range of personal sports for students, on and off campus, has broadened considerably. Students bored with a sport explore something new, always after a new challenge. One day it might be skateboarding some insane wall, or the next day it might be hot dog skiing. But people still found challenges with old favorites such as bicycling. Old sports continued to hold the people's attention such as bowling, swimming, golf, pick up basketball at the gym, or the old favorite, football games at the park.

To build speed while training, PAUL DEEM, gold medal winner during the Pan American Games, seriously trains for a very demanding sport

An early morning game of football during gym can wake up a person and make the whole day easier

Resisting the rush, CHESTER JORDAN delays KURT WESTON from stomping the quarterback

Stretching high to volley a lob, GASPER GUARRASI is an ardent competitor even in friendly games

With abandon, TONY JABUKA enjoys a free style, relaxed type of game

Gracefully kicking out of a wave, PAT GILOGOLY is caught in a moment of exhilarating energy

Peaceable Cabrillo Beach is a place where many find a spot to participate in a variety of recreational activities

Serving up the first point, KAREN WEISS bustles with enthusiasm despite the bite in the air during an early morning game

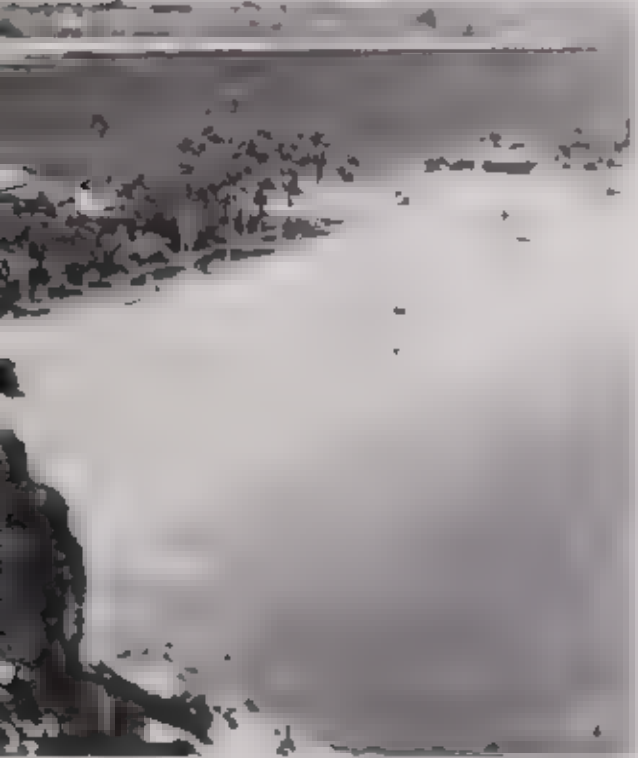

Caught in perfect position during midflight, STEVE BROWN makes his world-record breaking leap of 15 barrels

Speed and daring are the words to describe STEVE RIOS as he turns an abandoned swimming pool into a new challenge

Just riding around on a nice day is something that MIGUEL GOMEZ can get real pleasure from

Some sports gained so much popularity as to command national attention, such as the tennis boom with students, or the ever-increasing amount of students interested in skating. Surfing slacked off in popularity during the fall but picked up whenever the weather did. Clubs oriented around a sport were popular, from the traditional car clubs to a brand new scuba diving club. At a campus as active as San Pedro, the list of student sports was forever growing.

Entering the Granada Hills game as big underdogs, and being battled to a tie in a game that fans felt the Pirates dominated, the Pirate team became recognized as a power to be reckoned with. # JV WATER POLO

Practice

After having only been in existence for two years, the JV Water Polo team made an impressive showing. A bright moment was the 10-4 victory over Pacific Palisades, who were All-City champs last year. Skilled players as well as teamwork made the JV team what they were . . . Star players ERIC HANSEN, RUSSELL FRANKLIN, and MIKE SCOGNAMILLO led the team to their noteworthy title of All-City champions. Proving that where there's a will, there's a way was RUSSELL FRANKLIN, who said, "We had a lot of determination."

For the seventh consecutive year the Girls' Tennis team swept to an impressive championship as they captured first place honors in the Harbor League. The San Pedro team dominated the two rounds of play while they created an undefeated record, exhibiting steadiness and consistency. Winning more games than ever before, the varsity team earned a streak of 32 games without a loss over two seasons. A new alignment, developed to balance the loss of several key players who graduated, was set up to strengthen the defense by taking advantage

Team morale contributed to the poor showing of the Varsity Basketball team . . . Frustratingly close scores added to the deterioration of team spirit. A bright spot was the pre season game with Palos Verdes High, one of the best in the area. SP won in overtime on a last-second shot by BOB LOVITTO. With a week layoff before and after the Christmas tourney, the team lost valuable practice time. Then during the tourney, they lost a hard-fought game to Las Vegas High. In spite of the lack of victories, the varsity team had some very dedicated players, such as TOM ROLLINS, JEROME PIERSON and RON QUICK. ## High

Though they received little support from their fellow students, the JV basketball team remained enthusiastic. Their high spirits and diligent efforts were especially evident during the game with Locke. The game was lost by only one point, and the team members felt that they had played an outstanding game. Unique this season was the new "team captain" system. A different team captain was chosen for each game, so that every member was given the opportunity to represent the team, and talk with the referee before the game. In this way, all the JV's experienced the responsibilities involved in being a team captain.

CHAMPION LEAGUE

Unique

Despite rough competition, San Pedro sent many athletes to league and city finals. Such individuals as ROB HEBERER of Wrestling and BOB BAILEY of Cross Country made fine representatives of the Black and Gold teams. These gifted people could not have made it solely on their own, however. It took outstanding personnel in the teams that backed them up to make it possible for their skills and ability to stand out. It was a team effort that allowed the Soccer team to place first in league finals. Individual talent stood out in sports like Girls' Tennis, which placed first in league and second in city. # ACTIVITIES & Apathy

A lack of money curtailed clubs' action. In previous years dollars were earned through bake sales, car washes and other fund-raising activities. Now, all funds raised by student organizations were required to be deposited in the general student body fund because of a new enforcement of an old Board of Education rule. A second problem was apathy, not only in student body but among club members themselves. Despite these difficulties, some organizations still managed to record several accomplishments. Key Club was among the most active of these clubs, with almost weekly school and community service projects. Band and Drill Team practiced four mornings a week and again later in the day during football season, and then entered community events. Ecology Club did conservation projects on weekend campouts. A definite change in clubs came about during '76. The popularity of off-campus clubs and activities indicated a drift from the traditional high school club. Off campus car clubs flourished with caravans, go-cart racing and generally terrorizing of the streets of San Pedro

The SPHS Drill Team was one of the best in LA City! They received numerous trophies for 1st places in competitions and parades. Drill Team performed at the Sports Arena for a crowd of 15,000. They also have trophies to prove SPHS was the most spirited of all schools. The first part of the year the Drill Team devoted to football games and cheering, which meant practicing before school four days a week and then after school every day for four hours. The second part of the school year Drill Team spent most of its time practicing and participating in competitions and parades.

Dance for Those Who Can't

They boggled, bumped, twisted, strolled and hopped to the music of nine different bands from 6 pm Friday, January 9 to 6 pm the following Saturday. The dancers, 58 in all, had danced for 24 hours in the Key Club — Muscular Dystrophy Dance Marathon held at Old Towne Mall in Torrance. The SPHS Key Club has enlisted the help of 13 other Key Clubs in Division 19 to furnish people to dance in the marathon. The couples had obtained sponsors to pledge money to the Muscular Dystrophy Association for each hour they danced. And dance they did. After each two hours of dancing the marathoners were alternately given 5 minute and 30 minute rest breaks. During the breaks, the dancers were allowed to eat and collapse. Most of the food for the dance marathon was donated by local fast-food restaurants. Entertainment was provided for the audience during many breaks. A barbershop quartet sang Friday night, and Saturday morning Ronald McDonald performed his magic show for an audience of over a thousand. "Planning was the key to success," stated BOB MOORE, SPHS Key Club President. And a success it was. At the stroke of 6 pm, a gun was fired and $8,768 had been raised to help against Muscular Dystrophy.

Enthusiastic but weary, the marathoners bump, twist and boggle through the night at Old Towne Mall.

Positive Negatives

Thirty five hundred times during a school year the shutter of a San Pedro High camera clicked for the "Black and Gold" staff. Of these negatives, several hundred were printed. That tells a considerable part of the story of Photo Production. In addition to coping with the yearbook staff, the photo lab entered many students' photos into art contests, such as The Broadway, LA County Fair and Focus. After that, the students had to do their own classwork. In short, the photo lab students and MR. JOHN WHITSON were very busy for '76.

A mellow scene of pilings and fishing boats brought STEVE DAIR under a dock to get this artistic shot.

Obtaining a photo for yearbook use starts with a work order that hopefully explains what is to be shot to the photographer.

Drawing from his past experience, photographer MATT DECILLI decides on the best angle for the shot.

A complete roll of film is then developed into the negatives. Students like DOUG PHILBRICK often perform this duty.

Yearbook '76

The Yearbook Staff had it together for the Bicentennial year! Students worked hard to create an innovative record book of what was unique and a traditional memory book of who was who. Tempers sometimes flared, but staffers pitched in wherever needed so that deadlines were met. Room 172, with its air conditioning, water cooler, telephone, and refrigerator was shared with boistrous Key Clubbers. And through it all, RICK DAVIS, with the assistance of MR. CURTIS SHEFFIELD, guided the book to completion

ESPIRITUS '76

Colonists of 200 years came together as a group for a common cause and submerged many individual characteristics to win the war for independence. 1,000 students came together in San Pedro High to form the Class of '76, but they resisted being categorized together. No one quality could be associated with every senior, except the unique quality of individuality. Among the myriad of activities during the year, seniors worked, played, studied, created and celebrated. Class members socialized in and out of school, sometimes causing headaches for their parents and teachers. Every day they proved themselves to be a group of individuals robably the most visible group of seniors on campus were the seven varsity cheerleaders. Two big differences existed between male and female PE classes. Boys "stripped," but girls "dressed." Also, girls got to pick classes such as tennis, golf, volleyball and other games. Boys did warm-up exercises, ran laps, and followed an automatic rotation of sports. At least once a week, though, boys got "freeplay." Coaches checked

Life to some teenagers was a good album, a rock star to look up to, and an unforgettable concert. Just the idea of hearing Elton John sing his best was a perfect dream in itself. Yet, can you remember how you waited 10 hours in line for a pair of tickets to see David Bowie? How about mail order tickets? Waiting weeks for happiness in an envelope. But what seemed to be horror at the beginning turned to sheer delight at the end.

Long lines, always a problem in acquiring concert tickets, can sometimes get ridiculous, as shown in this caricature by TIM MILLER.

Calmly cruising up a swimming pool wall, PAT GILLOGLY expert surfer, skateboarder and artist, demonstrates the proper way to enjoy oneself.

Teenagers, especially high school seniors, need to be active. They need to do something for the sheer pleasure of it, for a totally selfish desire to have a good time. Surfing, tennis, skateboarding, street racing, skin diving, almost anything imaginable came into this category. Whatever it was, seniors did it, and at least tried to do it well.

Seniors who took Drivers' Training in the 12th grade were behind most of their classmates. Many seniors took it in their sophomore year or as soon as possible because they were eager to get their license. However, some students were too young or their parents wouldn't let them get their license, so they waited until their senior year.

Daniels Field was a popular place for the tennis buffs. After school and on weekends players from both the male and female teams would stay in shape by challenging one another to a match or two.

Students interested in a career in hospital occupations could take a course offered in cooperation with San Pedro and Peninsula Hospital. As well as learning the basics of nursing, students actually worked with nurses in the various wards in the hospital. Training took up two class periods. With one year in this special class, a student could become a nurse's aide.

Using her knowledge from nurse's training, MEGAN SHULTS takes STEVE TEDESCO's blood pressure for practice.

In the Consumer Law class students learned to protect themselves from frauds and rip-off artists. Guest speakers from the LA Police Department, the Better Business Bureau, and the Post Office advised students on how to detect illegal businesses, and what to do after you find you have been ripped-off. Class members were involved in discussions on insurance and other essentials in every day living. Students who took the semester course received five credits for Social Studies.

The passing period is a sad reality for many students. They are not able to finish the end of the assignment or the other in the six minute passing period. So they cannot do the book and they had to go to their lockers. As a result many students go to their lockers during the passing period.

In an area as large as Los Angeles and with a population as mobile as LA's, it is unusual to find a community as settled and stable as San Pedro. Many teachers both work and reside here, consequently their children attend SPHS. Seniors CHRIS ALEX, PAT BENDER, PAM GAULT, KEN KANOUSE, CATHY SEIXAS, and VINCE TEORA had parents on the faculty.

During a pause in their busy days, MR. GUS ALEX and son CHRIS chat in senior court.

Teaching young children to read and write was important to some students at San Pedro High School. During fifth and sixth periods, students traveled to area elementary schools by their own transportation to tutor the kids and help teachers. The students did it for school credit and experience. There was no pay involved at all.

Listening to a young reader, BILL LURIE tutors a small group, freeing the teacher to work with other students.

 school ring elicited mixed reactions. Many considered it too expensive, but San Pedro is a community in which many adults still wear their SPHS rings from years ago. A ring held memories for many with the year of graduation and the figure of a pirate on it. Rings came in a choice of styles, size of stones and gold or silver. Prices ranged from $34 to almost $50 at the school finance office and over $100 at local jewelers.

And so the portraits of the "Espiritus" class come to a close. The name was appropriate for a bi-centennial class. Spirit grew as more and more seniors realized this was their last opportunity to participate in sports and activities during their high school years. To the seniors this last year of the 200 was the most important.

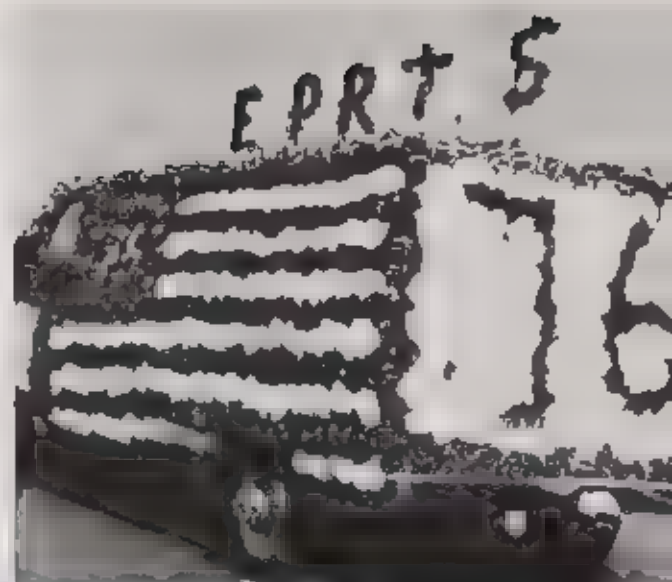

During the Powder Puff game, ROBERT WHITNEY, CLARK CARNEY (hidden) and STEVE TEDESCO demonstrate their prowess, or lack of it, as flag girls.

The annual Senior Week held December 1-5 started with the Powder Puff Football Game at lunch on Monday, with senior girls versus the junior girls, while members of football, water polo and Key Club did their best as cheerleaders. The week ended with Color Day. Seniors decorated their cars in the bi-centennial theme. After driving them around town, the cars were parked outside the small gym for judging. Later on the class of '76 held the Color Day Dance in the small gym. During the week, there were activities ranging from a cake sale to a hot-dog eating contest to a skate-a-rama, held at the Olympic Ice Arena in Harbor City. It turned out to be a fun evening for both experienced skaters and novices

As juniors began their second year in high school, some joined clubs, sports, student government and activities such as those to make it worth their while. Yet others would much rather do "their own thing," find jobs, or burn around campus at lunch or nutrition with their friends.

Excluded from the rush of lunch, students often found places to hide themselves from the crowds. Many liked just to stay around school where they wouldn't have to go far. Surprisingly, students found isolated places on campus that supplied the peace and quiet they needed to clear their minds.

Getting away from the rush, VIRGINIA LOGRANDI and VICTORIA QUIÑEROS catch up on the latest news during lunch.

alloween suckers were sold October 27-29 to raise money and help support the junior class. Because of the district regulations, only juniors themselves could buy this Pumpkin Pop, but they could send it to anyone. The total sale was a great success. The class made double the profit hoped for.

Ditching was a favorite sport of juniors. Along with the running and hiding there was also the problem of what to do if you got caught.

Many students took the chance, and some got away with it by forging notes or making up some excuses that sounded legitimate enough to get back in class. The others faced up to the ultimate consequences.

Fifth period ditching is prevalent as students found it hard to return to class after lunch break. CARY MABON, TIM THOMAS and MARK SIAS pose in a favorite spot for the students on "late lunch."

Moving sometimes meant changing schools. For juniors it may have been kind of awkward making new friends all over again. Eventually, though, the new students managed to find someone to show them the sights and introduce them to fellow students. New enrollees were less fortunate in getting to choose the classes needed or wanted. They were put in left-over and sometimes even crowded classes

Many college-bound juniors took the PSAT on October 25 at Narbonne High School (there were four other testing centers in the Los Angeles area). The two hour test consisted of two parts: a verbal section, which involved vocabulary, grammar, and reading skills, and a mathematics section, which dealt with mostly basic skills. Approximately 150-200 students from SPHS took this test.

Counselor MRS VIRGINIA YAMAMOTO advises TIM HUNT about the yearly PSAT given to juniors in November.

Busing at SPHS was an everyday task for those who rode them. There were 2 regular buses that served the students  $3\frac{1}{2}$  miles away from school; one permit with transportation for the purpose of integration and one RTD from Terminal Island. Students were picked up at 7:00 am and 7:45 am and brought to school. Then buses left the school at 2:00 pm, 3:00 pm and 5:30 pm to take them home.

Expressing close friendship, RON CHANDLER and GLEN LOGAN bide their time waiting for the bus to take them home.

Photography was one way of getting involved with all school activities. Under the supervision of MR. "Advanced" students were able to improve their skills by shooting pictures for journalism and year-book.

Extra hours were put in by band students for practicing, marching, and preparing for performances at half-time. After days of lip cracking and chapping, many students worked to be able to afford their own instruments. During football season the band members practiced at 7:00 AM on the cold and wet grass of Dodson Field. One night of the week was set aside for individual practice of sections.

Artist TIM MURPHY portrays the 10th graders' impression of the traffic in the halls.

Explanations seek the minds of KEVIN SMITH and RAMIE QUICK as they listen to a counselor's response to their question.

Braces are common among the sophomores, as JUAN PRICE shows the thousand dollar smile.

For many juniors and seniors, returning to school in September was rather like returning to an old friend . . . but can they remember those first traumatic days as a sophomore? Some tenth graders felt as if they were entering the seventh grade all over again, while others felt lost and unwanted. The use of a map helped considerably to guide the students around the large campus. But soon after school began, they adjusted to the atmosphere of the school and fitted in as a part of SPS.

Tenth grade co-presidents, KEVIN JOHNSON and ROSEANN RODRIQUES begin to plan activities for the sophomores.

Are they triplets? No, just friends! TRACY BOEHM, MIKE MCCORMICK and LORI DAVIS get second and third glances on campus.

The pressure of beating the tardy bell causes Marcia Johnson to rush to her next class.

Required to take drivers' education before they were able to take drivers' training, most students chose to take it in the 10th grade. This year, like the past years, students learned such things as rules of the road, driving a car under most conditions and parts of the car.

Sophomore CARLOS SANCHEZ learns about a car's engine as MR. JERRY LOVAROV explains where each part belongs.

Five periods a day was a new experience for sophomores. Most students started school at 8:00 and got out at 2:00, which gave them more free time outside of school. Others who had a sport started school at 9:00. This gave them an extra hour to sleep in or to do school work while others were already in class.

Study, study, study, that's what most students do, like DIANA FEENSTRA is doing in the hot sun before her third period.

Tests were a common sight in Guidance, because it was in this class that students took aptitude tests and others to measure their talents and abilities. They also learned proper study habits and what occupations to take up when they graduated.

Discovering what jobs they're capable of, TAYLOR GASKINS and MIKE PEKICH hit the books in Guidance class.

Interscholastic sports was a new activity for many newcomers. For the first time they experienced the feeling of being a representative of their school. They learned to practice good sportsmanship and team spirit. Hours of hard work were also involved.

Shortly after the race, ANNABELLA DE ALMEIDA gets together with EDUARDO GUERRERO to offer him a refreshing drink to cool him off.

Many students gained extra credit points at home by watching "The Incredible Machine," a documentary on how the human body works. Other highlights of the past year included examining the cells through a microscope, learning about the function of the human body and dissecting animals.

Trying to get the best glimpse of a blood cell, PETE HYUN turns the coarse adjustment on his microscope.

For many sophomores the behind-the-wheel driving experience in the drivers' training cars was new and exciting. Although some felt a little fearful at the beginning, most looked forward to the new freedoms and responsibilities of driving. The five week course was based on a pass/fail grading basis, and the student drivers spent time not only driving out on the roads, but also in the drivers' training simulators.

Safety precautions are practiced by RICK SIVERSON as he fastens his seat belt in the drivers' training simulator.

Sophomores began their first few days in the usual hesitancy and trepidation, as they began to feel out their new surroundings. For some the plunge into senior high school was eased by summer school classes they had taken at SPHS, but many still found the new environment required a little adapting on their part. Groups displaced from their junior high schools reformed somewhat protectively. But as the weeks progressed, the structure of their boundaries began to blur.

Among the noontime concert crowd, sophomores enjoy the music.

Many new sophomores found that their high school teachers expected more out of them than had their junior high instructors, and experienced culture shock as books were issued the first day, and homework assignments given the first week. But many sophomores began to realize the importance of their studies as they began to prepare for their futures.

The few minutes before school are not wasted as ANDRA WELSH studies for a test.

Threatened budget cuts created a spring of doubt and a summer of indecision in 1975. Untenured faculty members were not assured of employment until the "last minute." Luckily the school board again found the necessary funds. This together with Principal DAVE CARTER's astute planning, made it possible for the entire staff to return in the fall. Instructors on leave for the year were MRS. RUTH BURGESS, MS. LINDA RAGIN, MRS. JACKIE SHOLES and MR. STEVE MORRIS. Those on leave for spring were MISS BETTY VAGASY, MRS. LINDA JOHNSON, MRS. MARY LEE and MRS. VIRGINIA McGANN. MR. WILLIAM DECLERC, was gone both semesters on special assignment to the area A office to work on a community-centered classroom program.

Today there are so many more exhilarating things to do outside school that most students gear their schedules to split before 12:30. Kids of the 70's are more sophisticated and better adjusted psychologically than we were, hence, they're probably less prone to overtly exhibit behavior termed 'School Spirit'."

Literally holding the campus together were the noon aides, cafeteria workers, educational aides, carpenter, and custodians. Their efforts, both individually and collectively, maintained the order that made possible the smooth functioning of the school. It was the job of the noon aides to supervise the students at lunch and nutrition and before school. Educational aides, working mainly with ESL classes, assisted teachers with grading and paperwork to give them more time with their students. Though continually hampered by lack of workers, the custodial staff successfully handled the responsibility of keeping up the appearance of the campus. Several aides and members of the custodial staff had attended SPHS as students.

Clerks

Often underestimated was the work that went on in the attendance, main, counseling and other administrative offices. Different problems popped up everyday, and unexpected problems required versatile people to handle them efficiently. The attendance office took care of students returning from absences checking back into school, and kept attendance records to submit for state funding. The clerks in the counseling office assisted the counselors with recording students' grades and maintaining records of schedules. The nucleus of the administration was the main office. Along with co-ordinating all the other administrative offices, the main office was responsible for keeping files on employees, issuing district bulletins and working the telephone switchboard. A valuable worker was MRS CORINNE ELY, who was secretary to MR DAVID CARTER and head of the clerical staff.

Pirate Boosters

Pirate Boosters played an important part in the athletic department. Money earned by the club was distributed to the boys and girls athletic departments. This was important to all students since Boosters took care of many of the Physical Education needs. More school funds were then available for other groups.

Boosters provided $4,000 in funds for equipment, scholarships, trophies, films and rental and repair fees. Each member and family were entitled to sit in the Booster section at all football games. Working with Lady Boosters, the Pirate Boosters complemented each other in supporting school activities.

Thinking things over, JERRY GARCIA and DON TEDESCO plan a future project while MARC MORROW, DICK DEEMAR, and WALT ROEDER discuss other matters.

Before a monthly board meeting, SAM POLSTON, OLIVER COKER, BILL SEIXAS and JIM YOUNG take care of club paperwork.

Participation by both the Lady Boosters and Pirate Boosters is shown by MRS. NANCY MAIN and MR. JIM TRANI, as they chaperone the homecoming dance.

Discussion by board members occupies attention of 1975 President MRS. BARBARA TRANI and 1976 President MRS. GERRY ERICSSON.

For outstanding dedication to the teaching profession, MRS. MIRIAM EVANS accepts an award honoring her as Lady Booster Teacher of the Year from MRS. BARBARA TRANI.

At a Lady Booster board meeting, PAT DRUSKOVICH, JEAN BROWN and SHIRLEY BRACK ponder over a school service activity while Treasurer MARION FAY begins to write checks.

Lady Boosters

Lady Boosters was originally planned a year ago to aid girls' athletics, but by the time the club was actually formed it was decided they were needed by the entire school. So they helped such departments as Home Economics, Drama, Music, Physical Education and others. They designed and made the float for the Christmas parade on which the Homecoming Court rode.

A giant fund-raising by Lady Boosters and Pirate Boosters was the barbeque at police pistol range in August. They provided time and / or money wherever it was needed. Even though this was only their second year of operation, Lady Boosters had over 200 members. Unlike the Pirate Boosters, the Lady Boosters is a co-ed organization.

Advisory Council

Having a Community Advisory Council is not very uncommon since every school in the Los Angeles City School District is required to have one. The council is made up of parents, teachers, students and members of school support groups. During their first few meetings they elected new officers, discussed standards of pupil behavior and heard LT MITCHELL MARI SICH, of LAPD, speak about law enforcement in the community. The group met the fourth Monday of most school months and their main purpose was to act as an advisory group to the principal.

Parents expressing views on school affairs is a vital part of the Community Advisory Council. Chairman RICK RAMSAY conducts meeting as MR. ARNOLD O'CONNOR listens.

Involving themselves in school and community affairs, SUSAN JOHNSON, MR. GUS ALEX, DEBBIE ROZESKI, DONNA NISHI and MRS. DOROTHY HARTMAN participate in an issue of student concern.

PTSA

The needs of San Pedro High School students were the main concern of the PTSA whose programs were directed towards keeping students in school, and providing for those in need. 800 community and student members and 81 teachers spread their efforts in a variety of areas. The organization purchased eye glasses, provided funds for health centers, sponsored Grad nite to Disneyland for seniors and sponsored the senior bake sale. Another important aspect of the PTSA's work is a watchdog concerning legislation which may affect students.

FRONT ROW Mrs. Gwen Rozeski, Mrs. Lois Barton, Mrs. Norma Formica, Mrs. Pauline Nevill. 2nd ROW Mrs. Ruth Connor, Mrs. Margaret Broughton, Mrs. Matge Bonfield, Mrs. Jennice Cole, Mrs. Lyn Kamholz, Arnold O'Connor. TOP ROW Mrs. Beverly Chapman, Mrs. Daniel Johnson, Mrs. Janet Head, Mrs. Jerry Spinosa, Mrs. Evelyn Jones, Mrs. Dorothy Harman.

For outstanding service to the music students of SPHS, MR. MANLY WOOD was honored with the PTSA Honorary Service Award, the highest award PTSA can give.

In the PTSA Baking contest, MRS. BARBARA TRANI, MIKE SMITH, MRS. HELEN ROSENBAUM, MIKE MONROY, ART ARELLANES and MRS. NORMA FORMICA participated as judges.

At their destination, they meet the prospective buyer. Through fast and diplomacy, they sell the ad!

With the agreement reached, the mission is accomplished.

Then it's off to 172!!

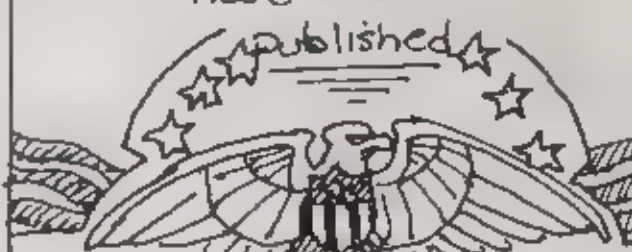

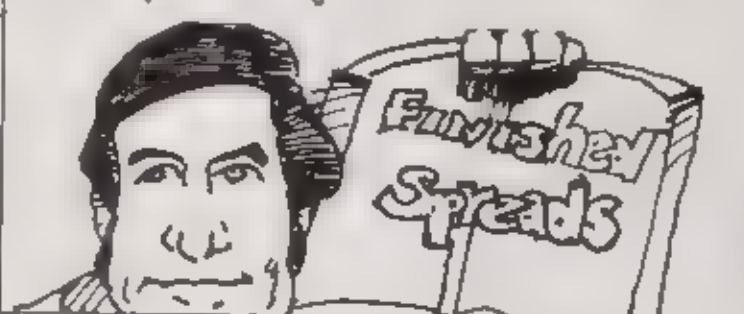

Where expert writers, artists, and photographers transform these ads into...

The Finished ad design!!!

It is here that our dashing sales representative, Steve Eddy, whisks the ads as well as other pages to Taylor Publishing Company truly finishing the staffs efforts

These are the people of the ad staff. We acknowledge their assistance for which this yearbook could not have been published.

It was an impressive year for members of the Black and Gold advertising staff, as they sold more yearbooks than ever before, and brought in more advertising than in any previous year. 2300 yearbooks were sold in a unique one-day-only merchandising sale, and the sale of these books provided the main source of income for the book's production. Advertisements made up the remainder of the income, and the ad campaign was successful because of the efforts of Ad Manager JACK POLICH and his staff of GARY BETTIS, TOM FRIEBURG, RON FULLER, JERRY MARINER, VINCE PERKOV and DOUG WEBER. The successful ad campaign was due to the hard work and hustle of the ad staff, and the support of local merchants.
